

PharmD Graduate attributes

Graduate attributes
1. Demonstrate in-depth professional knowledge about pharmacy and pharmacy practice, including conceptual, theoretical, methodology for further independent learning, ethics, and professional skills in pharmaceutical practice.
2. Have the ability to apply problem-solving, research skills, retrieval, analysis, and interpretation of the scientific literature to enhance significantly their own practice-related activities .
3. Lifelong learning for personal development and excellence in professional practice.
4. Perform effectively in a team environment, providing leadership, team building, exerting a positive influence, and demonstrating project management skills.
5. Make effective use of communication and information technology and able to carry out numerical calculations and analyses relevant to pharmacy and pharmaceutical practice.
6. Demonstrate professional ethics and acting responsibly, ethically and with integrity within social and cultural contexts.